

When is the Right Time to Honor our Military Heroes?

The answer to the question “When is the right time to honor our military heroes?” should be every single day, every single second. They have contributed a lot for us citizens, and put their life on the line every day.

A few reasons why everybody should honor our military heroes are because life in the military is dangerous, and they didn’t have to join the military; it’s a choice, and they chose to protect their country. The military men are really honorable, because their field of work is their life or death. They have to fight for their lives, their loved ones, and for the entire country. They were the ones that were brave and courageous enough to fight for us, people that they don’t even know. They loved their country so much that they were willing to risk their lives to protect it. That is why they deserved to be called “honorable men”.

There are many examples of when the military men fought. The first one would be the American Revolutionary War. These military men, known as militia men, fought for independence so that our country would be free. The war was fought 1775-1783. The colonists went through many hardships to get independence and freedom from Britain. There was also the War of 1812, the Mexican-American War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, and the Iraqi Freedom. All of these wars ranged from 2-9 years, and the U.S. only lost 2 of these wars. Everyone that fought in the wars must’ve been really dedicated to their country, to be able to fight for so long.

From these examples, anybody can see that these military heroes were the ones that helped make our country the way it is today. If the militia men didn’t fight for our independence, America would still be under Britain’s rule. If they didn’t fight the Mexican-American War, we wouldn’t have Texas today, and if they didn’t fight the Spanish-American War, the world wouldn’t recognize America as a powerful country. All the men that fought in the wars have helped shape our country to what it is today. Everybody should encourage others to help recognize these military heroes as the ones that helped build America, from the 13 colonies, to what it has turned into today, the most powerful country in the world.
